

the blitzkrieg in a Cold War-era fallout shelter in a small Georgia town.

But being trapped in an underground tomb with strangers isn't always a safe alternative. They bring their own bombs; fears, prejudices, and hatreds.

Plan B by Ansandra Woodman. Helena's mother thought she was saving the world; instead, Christina Harris helped unleash a plot to destroy the world's population with a deadly virus. The Harris family hides from the wrath of the Global Alliance in the Alaskan wilderness. The Fall of Man by J.V. Roberts.

After the bombs fell and the old world passed away, two sides emerged from the destruction: the Union and the Rebels. For years a great civil war raged, ending in a fragile truce. Now the Lord Marshal of the Union seeks to unite the land, this time using chests of coin rather than bullets. Invasion by Paul Moxham. Logan Pollack is only a few hours away from getting married to his one and only sweetheart when all hell breaks loose. The invasion comes without warning and, within a matter of minutes, everything changes for him and everyone else on Earth. The New Agenda by Simone Pond. Society was collapsing but young, idealistic William Morray had hoped his father's acclaimed Repatterning Program--a precursor to the New Agenda--could get things back on track.

They said the Repatterning was for the greater good, but it was a lie.

Zero Patient One by Harmon Cooper. Sterling is a gambler with his family's lives at stake. Halo is a Goddess with a troubling secret. Hunter is a religious fanatic with an unquenchable thirst for human flesh.
