Nick Bailey is a ruined man.

Once an NFL star, he thought he had it all. Fame. Money. Respect. After losing everything to injury and scandal, he fell from his pedestal, becoming the most hated man in town. Picking up the pieces of a shattered life is harder than it looks, but Nick is tired of being the brooding loner. He wants to move on.

Jenna Moore was born to perform. She loves the high she gets from being on stage, singing in front of a crowd—even if it's just at the local bar on weekends. Everyone assumes she wants the rock 'n roll dream—the stardom, the crowds of adoring fans. But as much as she loves to sing, fame won't fill the hole in her heart. Nick has watched Jenna for months, desperate to love her. But the ghosts of his past still haunt him. Could a woman like her ever want a man like him?
