Hannah Blake had given up on more than partnership with Xander Finley -- in their legal clinic.

Resistance from a local judge and another lawyer, and finding the body of the 3rd victim of a serial killer complicated the move to a second office in Tabor Heights. When the killer appeared to have chosen Hannah as his next 'true love', Xander's attentions became warmer and more personal.

Hannah knew better than to hope it would last beyond the crisis. Foxhole love wasn't any more real than foxhole religion. Xander, on the other hand, was glad his eyes had finally been opened. The problem was convincing Hannah that he was for real. It was time to pray for more than her safety.
